

THREAT OF WAR IN EUROPE EMPHASIZED BY DEVELOPMENTS

Prime Minister Eamon De Valera Cancels Projected Visit to United States

CHANGE BOAT FOR KING

King and Queen to Use Liner Empress of Australia, Not Cruiser Repulse

By Charles A. Smith (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Apr. 27.—The threat of war in Europe was emphasized in startling fashions today, when Prime Minister Eamon De Valera, of Eire, cancelled his projected visit to the United States, and the Canadian-Pacific liner "Empress of Australia" was chosen instead of the battle cruiser "Repulse," to carry King George and Queen Elizabeth across the sea next month.

De Valera told the Daily Eirean in Dublin that he had cancelled his trip "in view of yesterday's grave event"—an obvious reference to introduction of conscription by the government of Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The British conscription decrees, calling for the colors some 200,000 men between the ages of 20 and 21, does not directly involve the Free State of Eire. It was thought likely, however, that the British government had given the Eire High Commission in London some confidential information prompting De Valera to cancel his trip, or that Eire itself may be contemplating some important preparedness measures.

Moving for a conscription bill in the House of Commons today, Chamberlain declared that compulsory military service had been announced yesterday "because it had been delayed until next week it almost inevitably would have been interpreted as related to tomorrow's speech by Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler."

The Fuehrer is to address the Reichstag tomorrow in answer to President Roosevelt's peace proposal. "The conscription proposals," Chamberlain said, "are likely dependent on the speech."

Liner With Prince Aboard

In Collision

New York, Apr. 27.—The Norwegian-American liner Oslofjord, bearing Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway on their first visit to the United States, collided with the pilot boat at Sandy Hook early today in a fog-filled Ambrose Light.

Early reports said the pilot boat was badly damaged and either beached or sunk. Her crew of 16 men and 9 pilots were rescued in safety, however, and no one was hurt.

The accident occurred shortly after the Oslofjord signalled the Sandy Hook, stationed one quarter mile south southeast of Ambrose Lightship, for a pilot. Confusion in signals and the thick fog which reduced visibility almost to zero, were blamed.

To Bring Ex-Convict To Phila. for Arsenic Ring Probe

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 27.—(INS)—Arrested in New York as the "brains" of Philadelphia's macabre arsenic murder ring, Caesar Valente, 33-year-old ex-convict, today was to be brought to Philadelphia for questioning in the machinations of the poison conspiracy.

A former boarder in the North Philadelphia home of Mrs. Carina Favato, self-confessed poisoner of three of the ring's victims, Valente was described by detectives as the "witch doctor" who helped plot the eerie series of insurance slayings and furnished vials of poison to carry out murders.

Meanwhile, renewed confidence that rapidly-breaking developments would split open the largest case of mass slayings ever handled by an American court was expressed by detectives in the light of two additional happenings.

These were the arrest of the widow of a North Philadelphia baker who reportedly had been slain by the ring although his death was listed officially as a "hit-run" motor case and a move by Herman Petrillo, convicted arch-conspirator in the plot, to turn State's evidence.

Confirming police suspicions, the arrest of the newest Philadelphia suspect, Mrs. Marie Woloshyn, 40, allegedly revealed that the poisoning coterie dealt in other means of violent death in addition to poison. The woman's husband, detectives asserted, was run down by an automobile driven by Petrillo himself.

Petrillo, who until today stubbornly had maintained his innocence, suddenly decided to assist authorities in their investigation in an effort to escape the electric chair, police said. Now seeking a new trial, Petrillo was convicted by a jury which made a mandatory recommendation of capital punishment.

Church School Teachers Hear Rev. William Sharp

Thirty teachers from Episcopal Church Schools attended the semi-annual meeting of Bucks County Church School Association in St. James' parish house last evening.

The Rev. George E. Boswell, rector, introduced the Rev. William Sharp, Kensington, as the speaker of the evening. A discussion followed, with a social time and refreshments then being in order.

Representatives of Episcopal Church Schools at Newtown, Hulmeville, Langhorne, Yardley, Eddington, and Bristol, were present.

QUESTIONS VALUE OF ARMORED CARS IN WAR

Former German Chief-of-Staff Sees Many Threats To Tanks

ANTI-ARMOR GUNS

(This is the second of two articles on future warfare and future wars, revealing the views of General Georg Wetzell, former chief-of-staff under General von Seeckt and until 1934 chief military adviser of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek.)

By Walter Dietzel (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, April 27.—(INS)—"It seems advisable therefore, also in accordance with quite recent experiences in Spanish and Chinese theaters of war, not to place expectations and hopes on armored cars and tanks too high, but to remain within the frame of actual possibilities."

This, in a few words, is the warning against over-exaggerated hopes on one of the most modern war weapons voiced by General Georg Wetzell, former chief-of-staff under late General von Seeckt and until 1934 military adviser of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek in an article published in a survey of the development of the German Defense forces since 1918.

Claiming that experiences in the World War and more recent experiences prove that the "armored weapon Continued On Page Six

Expect Potomac Pollution Bill To Pass The House

(Special to Courier)

HARRISBURG, Apr. 27.—On the House Calendar this week was the Potomac Valley Pollution Bill, introduced by Thomas B. Stockham, Representative from Bucks County. This bill proposes to create a commission from Pennsylvania to act jointly with commissions from the States of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, to act upon the problem of pollution of the Potomac River. These commissions will form an interstate commission to regulate the river valley, much the same as the commission which was set up to control the Delaware River Basin, formed by New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania.

It is expected that the bill will pass the final test in the House this week. Two other bills on the House calendar this week, House Bills Nos. 750 and 781, are jointly sponsored by Reps. Stockham and Yeakel, of Bucks County. These bills authorize the State to take over the old Delaware River Canal for park and highway purposes. It is expected that they will be passed this week, provided that the House does not consider the expense to be too great a burden upon the state treasury at this critical time.

Funeral for Lutz Youth Will Be Held Saturday

Funeral services for LeRoy Lutz, who died in Abington Hospital, yesterday morning, will be conducted on Saturday, at two p. m., from the funeral home of the H. S. Rue Estate, 314 Cedar street. Burial is to be made in Bristol Cemetery, and friends may call Friday evening. Hie Rev. John McElroy will officiate.

The deceased is the son of Harry and the late Florence Lutz, and was a resident of Bristol Township.

LeRoy, who was in his 17th year, had been a hospital patient for several months, having sustained an injury in a fall.

In addition to his father, LeRoy is survived by a sister, Florence, two brothers, Harry, Jr., and Martin; a step-sister, Mrs. Henry Kleish; and two step-brothers, Charles and Robert Brown.

Do You Like 'Em Alive?

(By "The Stroller")

Bristol has been "fish conscious" since time immemorial, but only since the wide publication has been given the "live gold-fish eating champions" has the borough given more attention to this species of the finny tribe.

Now they're selling gold-fish in the hard-ware stores, one dealer in nuts, bolts, hinges, tools, etc., recently displaying a sign telling the world in general that he sells gold-fish.

Mayhap a live fish-eating champion will come forth in this borough.

We have our ears wide open for details.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Commencement exercises for the 1939 graduating class of Morrisville high school will be held on the school campus in front of the Robert Morris Building, as has been the custom for the past two years, providing the weather permits, and plans are now under way for this event which will be held Tuesday evening, June 20.

Baccalaureate services will be held in the Morrisville school auditorium, Sunday night, June 18, with class night the previous Friday night.

Members of the senior class will make their trip to Washington, D. C., May 4, 5 and 6.

Other events scheduled for the balance of the school year include the Junior Prom, May 12; the annual concert by the musical organizations of the school, including the band, orchestra, glee clubs and choruses, Friday night, May 19. The Little Theatre will also present a play in connection with the latter event.

Mrs. Harry J. Shoemaker, Doylestown, announced that pupils representing 25 schools in various parts of Bucks county had become members of the Bucks County Dogwood Association by having planted small dogwood trees and having contributed their school trees to be placed on the dogwood trail from Valley Forge to Washington Crossing.

In addition to these, said Mrs. Shoemaker, 535 Boy Scouts in other schools, have also become members of the county association by planting trees and by donating trees for the trail.

It has been announced that in the future the same opportunity will be afforded all boys and girls of school age in Bucks county.

In connection with the planting of the trees along the trail the children were instructed in the proper methods of planting and they were given much interesting information regarding the Revolutionary War period sites all along the trail.

Announcement has been made by Ralph T. Crowell, president, and Robert Kleppinger, secretary, that the Bucks County Fruit Growers' Association will hold a supper meeting at the Doylestown Inn, Doylestown, Monday, May 1, at 6:30 o'clock.

The meeting is being planned in an effort to create more interest and enthusiasm among the fruit growers of the county who recently held their annual meeting and decided to put on a membership campaign.

Professor John Ruef, Penna. State College expert, will talk on the "Polinization of Apples." Mr. Ruef will also represent the State Horticultural Association, of which he is the secretary, and give the fruit growers reasons for co-operating with the State association.

ANNOUNCE SUBSCRIBER LIST TO NEW PLAYHOUSE

Floors of Old Mill Have Been Removed and Work Is To Proceed

TO COST ABOUT $40,000

NEW HOPE, Apr. 27.—Announcement of the first list of subscribers to this Borough's outstanding community enterprise—the Bucks County Playhouse—has been made by the directors.

Confident optimism was the keynote yesterday when the officers and directors of the Bucks County Playhouse, Incorporated, and community center, met for luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chapin, on Jericho Mountain, south of this place, for the purpose of greeting the president of the organization, Mr. Chapin, and to report progress.

The directors discussed current matters and reported to the president that construction work on the playhouse which is being built around the old red grist mill at the juncture of the peaceful Delaware and Ingham Springs Creek, is already far along. The playhouse will cost somewhere around $40,000. Ground was broken (Continued On Page Six)

CONVOCATION MEETS

The Northeast Convocation of the Episcopal Diocese was held in St. James' parish house, corner Wood and Walnut streets, Tuesday evening, 70 attending. The entertainment was supplied by the students of the Granzow Dancing Studio, Croydon, and Robert Townsend, who rendered several numbers on the guitar. A business meeting was held and officers nominated for the coming year. After the meeting, dancing was enjoyed to the strains of a local orchestra. Refreshments were served.

Two Killed in Crash

Easton, April 27.—William Shimer, 57, prominent Nazareth banker, sportsman and businessman, and Edward Flick, 55, of Effort, Monroe County, were dead today, following the crash of their truck on the Wind Gap-Saylorsburg Road.

Injured and in a serious condition in Easton Hospital is Robert Flick, 70, of Endicott, New York, brother of one of the victims.

Shimer, owner of the truck, and president of the Nazareth Second National Bank, apparently lost control of the machine while making a turn, and hit a tree, police said. The trio were going to a hunting lodge nearby when the accident occurred.

President at Hyde Park

Highlands, N. Y., Apr. 27.—President Roosevelt came back to his Hyde Park family home today to entertain visiting royalty, with contracts in his pocket that will guarantee the Army Air Corps new fighting planes capable of better than 400 m. p. h. an hour.

Just before the President left Washington last night, Assistant Secretary of War Lewis Johnson, rushed to the outgoing special train to announce that the War Department had signed up for two new types of super-planes, which will be fitted into the additional air fleet of 600 planes under the newly approved air construction program.

The President returned to Hyde Park especially to throw his Hudson River estate open for the entertainment of the Norwegian and Danish Crown Prince and Princess, who were drawn to these shores by the New York and San Francisco fairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson entertained the following guests last Saturday in celebration of Mr. Wilson's birthday: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson and son Thomas; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John Knod, Mrs. Stephen Faherty and daughter Dorothy; Miss Anna Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNabb, Philadelphia.

POLICE TO AGAIN ROUND UP STRAY DOGS FOUND HERE

Many Complaints Have Been Received By The Police Department

OWNERS ARE WARNED

The nuisance of dogs running at large is again prevalent in Bristol and complaints have been received by the police, that numbers of stray dogs are creating an annoyance to residents in various sections of Bristol. "Can't something be done to keep the dogs off the streets and off the properties of other than their owners," is a question asked of the police.

The police state that the state law absolutely prohibits dogs running at large, regardless of whether they are licensed or not. Dogs when on the street must always be kept on leash. It is said.

Mr. Garner Their Target

Washington, April 26.

THE relations between the President and the Vice-President of the United States have reached a stage so acute that they constitute the outstanding feature of an extraordinary political situation. Members of the same party, they have become leaders of two factions hopelessly separated and completely antagonistic.

ON THE surface, when they meet at the White House or at dinner, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner appear the same jolly friends as of old. They exchange jokes, laugh heartily and seem to exude cordiality. Actually, there is between them a deep and growing resentment. How long this can go on without some open manifestation is an interesting question, but in the nature of things personal contact is an increasing strain. It can hardly be pleasant for either.

THE reasons for the rift are too well known to need repetition. They date back to the sit-down strikes of 1935, when Mr. Garner strongly felt that the President owed it to the country to express disapproval of the open defiance of the courts and the seizure of private property. He emphatically expressed himself to the President on this subject, but without result, and it unquestionably was one cause of the ruptured relations. However, the really serious break came in 1937 when Mr. Garner showed complete lack of sympathy with the President's effort to pack the Supreme Court, and later made clear his opposition to the renewal of the spending policy.

TO DISCUSS PROGRAM FOR CUBS WITH SCOUT COUNCIL

Charles F. Smith, Ass't Nat'l Director of Boy Scouts, To Visit Bucks County

TO SPEAK TOMORROW

Charles F. Smith, Assistant National Director of Education of the Boy Scouts of America, will visit the Bucks County Boy Scout Council tomorrow in the interest of Cubbing promotion.

Mr. Smith will meet with several groups of Cub leaders and council officers during the day and in the evening at 7:30 at the Court House, Doylestown, he will address a group of leaders and parents of Cubs on the Cub program.

Cubbing is the program for boys nine, ten and eleven years old and is based on boy interest of that age group up to the time they become twelve and of Scout age.

Mr. Smith is well known throughout the educational world as a teacher, leader and author of recreational education for boys of all ages. The Boy Scouts of America are fortunate to have secured Mr. Smith's services to act as a field instructor in Scouting, Sea Scouting and Cubbing.

For many years Mr. Smith was a member of the faculty of Columbia University. He has given special courses in many leading universities of the United States and has lectured in the University of London during the period when he acted as Executive Officer of the first World Scout Jam-boree. As a member of the National Boy Scout Educational Service he has participated in hundreds of Scouting and Cubbing courses in every state in the United States.

Mr. Smith has had an abundance of practical Scouting experience which dates back to the beginning of the Movement in 1910 when he started as a Scoutmaster. He has also served as a Troop Committeeman, District Scout Commissioner, Special National Field Commissioner and at present he is a member of the Staten Island Boy Scout Council.

Mr. Smith is perhaps best known to Scouters and Cubbers as the author of "Games and Recreational Methods" and a more recent book, "Games and Game Leadership." His writings also include an extensive four-year study of an experiment at Columbia University on Programs for Boys of Cub Age.

Orchestra is Dined At Yardley by Lions Club

YARDLEY, Apr. 27.—The Yardley Lions Club was host to members of the Yardley high school orchestra at a dinner in St. Andrew's parish house, on Tuesday evening, at their first public performance.

The Rev. Walter C. Pugh, president of the club, was toastmaster; and the program was furnished by the orchestra, which includes Marguerite Marion, Dorothy Zimmerman, Marie Worrell, Elsie Dregar, Ruth Labaw, Warren R. Smith, John Nay, William Nay, Janet Daughton, Ward McNair, Arthur Bennett, Melvin Vaughn, Consuelo Cadwallader, and Rachel Smith.

Louis C. Leedom gave a brief talk on some of the accomplishments of the club during its existence since 1933. One of the greatest accomplishments was the backing that the club has given the school, the Boy Scouts, and the Library, and many other philanthropic ventures.

MILLION VISITORS ARE PREDICTED FOR 'PENNSBURY' YEARLY

Dr. Donald A. Cadzow Claims Wealth Will Be Brought Through Restoration

SPEAKS TO ROTARIANS

Shows Motion Pictures of Site and Other Historic Places

A million visitors are predicted annually to "Pennsbury," the former home of William Penn, recently reproduced at Penn's Manor along the Delaware River.

Dr. Donald A. Cadzow, state archaeologist, in telling of the great plans for the future at the historic site, beloved by Penn, states that "in ten years it will bring great wealth to this section."

Dr. Cadzow addressed the Morrisville Rotary Club at its weekly dinner meeting.

He described how ruins of the old mansion were explored and the findings which enabled the restoration of the buildings to their original design. He described the restoration work from the very beginning, and added that the place is now practically completed with the exception of the furnishings and the landscape work.

The speaker showed motion pictures of the work at Pennsbury and other historical places in the State, and also spoke on the work of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, which has been active in recent years in the restoration and preservation of many of the historical places in Pennsylvania.

Dr. John Wittekind, a member of the Morrisville Rotary Club and a personal friend of Dr. Cadzow, introduced the speaker.

James and Jones Sing From Same Platform

HARRISBURG, Apr. 27.—(INS)—Governor Arthur H. James and Charles Alvin Jones stood upon a platform together before 400 people and sang "Way Down Upon the Swanee."

And a voice in the audience said: "It could only happen in America."

The occasion was the 22nd biennial dinner of the Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents Association, the gridiron dinner given once every two years by newspaper correspondents who cover Capitol Hill.

Long after the dinner and the festivities were over the one thing that stood out today in the memory of those who attended was the picture of Pennsylvania's Republican Governor and his Democratic opponent of last Fall's election standing together and singing the anthems of a bitter campaign long forgotten.

"There is the true essence of American democracy," commented an observer. Republicans and Democrats who a few short months ago bitterly assailed each other, this time gathered together in amity to hear themselves lampooned with barbs which stung but left no resentment.

Present in addition to Governor James and Charles Alvin Jones, were Governor James' cabinet, several former Governors, Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence, numerous members of former Gov. George H. Earle's official family, legislators, judges, district attorneys, politicians, and just plain citizens.

Predict Passage of The Emergency Tax Program

By Raymond Wilcox (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, April 27.—(INS)—Passage of the Administration's $153,000,000 emergency tax program and legislation creating a Department of Commerce was today definitely set for Monday night when the Legislature reconvenes after a week-end recess. Present plans call for final adjournment on May 19.

Senator G. Mason Owlett, G. O. P. floor leader, announced that today's session would be taken up chiefly with committee meetings and that all third reading bills would go over until Monday. The tax and commerce legislation has already been approved by the House. Richard P. Brown, Philadelphia business man, is reportedly slated for the post of Secretary of Commerce.

Delay in passage of the eight Earle Administration bills now being re-enacted was to permit additional "technical" amendments, said Owlett. In addition, he said, some of the bills have not yet been printed.

The constitutional amendment for a graduated State income tax went down to defeat in the Senate, 24-20, less than a constitutional majority, with party lines split. Republicans and Democrats joining hands to defeat the measure. Another attempt to obtain the two votes necessary for passage was seen, however, when Senator Owlett asked that the vote be reconsidered and the measure placed on the postponed calendar. The legislation is sponsored by Senator George Woodward, Philadelphia Republican. A similar measure went down to defeat at the polls in 1937.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD STORE

The neighborhood store is an American institution without which life would not be the same. It is in the neighborhood store that the Americanism of an earlier—and some say, happier—day is perpetuated. The friendly attitude one encounters there, although the purchase may amount to only a few pennies, the interest in affairs of the neighborhood that is often lacking in large commercial enterprises, make the neighborhood store an irresistible magnet for those who have not made their daily call to buy some of the little but most important necessities of life.

In this age of efficiency, speed and mass selling, the praises of the neighborhood store cannot be sung too highly. Those who live in one of the few neighborhoods that cannot boast this link with commerce are to be pitied. They do not know what real living is, as they will admit if one of these smaller units of trade is opened in their vicinity.

The town that has many neighborhood stores advantageously located among its homes and supplying their needs, is indeed fortunate. People's lives are made easier and happier in a town like that. The deadening hand of over-commercialized trade passes them by lightly and cannot stultify their very natures. What this country needs is a neighborhood store in every neighborhood.

Some neighborhood stores have hard sledding. Sometimes the people in a neighborhood do not appreciate the convenience of a neighborhood store, and it is forced to close or to move to another part of town. This is unfortunate, as the unappreciative residents learn when there is no nearby store. If there is a store near your home, buy there. You cannot do better elsewhere, and you may do a whole lot worse.

UPS AND DOWNS

Among the people who took hard blows through the recent depression, was a large element who had had considerable money, but who had always made it their practice to take chances in business matters. The highest type of investments, those chosen by the most cautious people, did not pay the interest they demanded. So they took their money and put it into more or less speculative securities.

To many, such losses have been a painful and even terrible tragedy. Many of them never understood investing money. They took advice from people whose judgment proved wrong. A good many of them, particularly women, have no means of earning a living. They are still somewhat dazed and bewildered like people who have been through a destructive earthquake, as they try to plan their lives on some new basis.

Many of these losers, however, have a cheerful and optimistic temperament. They had a good run for their money in boom times. They waste no time now in vain regrets. The same sanguine spirit that led them to take chances before, will give them courage for new ventures. Only next time, let us hope they salt away some secure nest eggs where the earthquakes can't shatter them.

Chivalry is on its last legs in the West. Two men not only siphoned the gasoline from the automobile of a lady deputy sheriff at Grant's Pass, Ore., with a hose they had stolen from her garden but told her to scat! when she approached and told them they were under arrest.

the United States seal and looked out through a window at the Stars and Stripes flying in the breeze.

"I wish every child in the country could stand here and feel the pride of being an Ameri-

Garner's eyes squinted at him under their bushy brows.

"Have you a son, Mr. Montgomery?" he asked.

The star said he had.

The vice president called an attendant who returned after a while with a package for Montgomery.

"What's this?" asked the actor.

"It's an American flag," replied

Garner. "Take it home and give it to your son."

Irony from Hollywood. When

Errol Flynn and Bud Ernst made their mercy flight to Point Asuncion to take an ailing sailor off the star's yacht, they had to land in a bean field 16 miles from the coast.

They walked this distance and then back again, helping to carry the sick man on a stretcher.

Flynn, who tosses off prodigious hardships on the screen, emerged from the experience with bruised and blistered feet and was scarcely able to get out of bed next day.

Beverly Hills police called Bette

Davis to say that the porch and patio of her former home were piled high with flowers. The star went to investigate and discov-—flowers sent by friends on her birthday, April 5, and left by a florist who didn't know she had moved and thought she was just out for an hour.

R-K-O in "Five Came Back."

It's a good guess that he and

Mrs. Morris will be reunited and will turn the trip into a second honeymoon.

Weren't Miriam Hopkins and her husband, Anatole Litvak, supposed to live in separate houses on the same lot? Tisn't so, for there's only one house on her Tower road

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XXXVIII

"That was actually their farewell. 'Send your men off with a smile.' But he was not her man. Beverly found herself violently weeping as the cab drove off, and after a time the driver slowed down and, turning, spoke to her.

"Hard luck, lady," he said. "But I expect he'll come back all right." "I'm sorry," she gasped. "I'm all right now."

"Fine-looking soldier he makes. I could drive you to the dock, and maybe you'd see him again. You'd have to walk a ways, but I know the transport and where it is."

She could not go back to her lonely hotel room. Not yet, with Chris gathering up his stuff and getting ready to sail. So in the end she did just that, to retain forever in her mind a picture as small as the area under one street lamp, with herself in foot in the shadows, the back-ground a paved yard and a ship, and under that lamp, weighed down with their rifles and blanket rolls, an endless line of men sloping along. They were silent, save for the shuffling of their feet on the stones. They moved out of darkness into the light and then into darkness. The darkness swallowed them. It was as though they had had only that single moment of existence.

But there was no sign of Chris, and at last she turned and went back to the cab.

This is not a story of the war, but of one man who played his own small part in it and emerged perhaps more of a man and certainly a better surgeon. For Chris was always to divide his active life into two parts: before and after that summer of nineteen hundred and eighteen. With only a few weeks in France to the credit of his division, the second battle of the Marne was launched.

He had been shifted about. He was a regimental surgeon now, and he knew what that meant. Along with the other medical officers he was to go forward with the troops to supervise the establishment of first-aid stations; from these the wounded could be evacuated to the field hospitals a few kilometers behind the lines.

He was a rare of a suppressed excitement when word came that the division was moving up, and on the last night he wrote the letters which were to go in case things went wrong with him. He wrote four: to Katie first, then to Beverly and Miss Nettie, and last, one to Hiram Mortimer about Ursula's boy.

"I know I have failed you in many ways," he wrote to Katie. "I have wanted you to be happy, but I probably could not have made any woman happy, my dear. Among other things I have been too selfishly engrossed in my work. The failure is mine, not yours; so in case you receive this, I hope you will build yourself a new life, and be happy in it."

There was more to it, as if by very length he could atone for its failure to carry what he could neither feel nor write. But his letter to Beverly was just a line or two:

"Don't grieve, my darling. I have never changed, and—strange how this war makes one think—there may be something beyond. In that case I shall be there, busy perhaps, but still the same. Always the same, my dear."

Against the exodus of refugees moved the division, frantically attempting to clear the road, laughing and singing, shouting greetings to the peasants, growing over the delays. "How many kilometers now?" "Why, I could kick a barrel faster than this." And then at last a rise over a hill and a small straggling village, with a few hospital trucks in sight, and Field Hospital No. 1 was located. It was in a schoolhouse, and Chris, making an inventory, felt discouraged at the amount to do and the small time in which to do it. Already the battle was raging fiercely along a wide front, and there were rumors and counter-rumors. "Don't get out too much stuff. We may have to retire in a few hours."

The rest of the Sanitary Train came in. Ambulances appeared from nowhere. Portable stoves, kitchens, tents were set up outside, some of them for gas cases where even the clothing might carry death. Later on the giant disinfectors trailed in, driven by a steam engine and providing a chamber for delousing.

Ted had been appointed a sanitary inspector, and it was at this time that Chris came across him disconsolate in a field.

"Think of it, Chris. 'What did you do in the Great War, Papa?' And I'd have to tell them I was a louse hound!"

Inside the schoolhouse work was already under way, as some of the wounded had preceded them. They sat or lay in the courtyard, silent for the most part, while around them the dust flew and the roar of motor exhausts deafened them. Men were already moving among them, giving those who had not already received it the necessary antiseptic serum. Their faces were streaked with dust and sweat; the line seemed endless.

"Get another tray, and hurry!" More syringes, more "It's" marked by an iodine cross on the forehead; the line slowly lessening as the litter beds went up or the ambulances were loaded and started back. There were not enough beds. Men lay on their stretchers on the floor, or on the floor without stretchers.

Chris was working at terrific speed. The operating room was small and boiling hot. The men were brought in, their wounds dressed, operations performed when haste was essential, splints applied from the butcher wagon, bandages put on.

"Feel better now, son?"

"Yes, but God, I'm tired, Doc. Lemme lie here, won't you?"

But they could not lie there. They had to be moved on, on and back, to make room for the others coming in. They came in hundreds, some only slightly hurt, some to whom the dusty road marked the last journey. The medical personnel grinned at one another when they met—at their reddened eyes, their stained and dirty coats. They ate when they could, or not at all. They seldom slept, except more or less on their feet. Supplies began to give out, and one day a dresser opened a box of bandages and found them packed in newspapers of the date of the Spanish-American War.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

Don't Quibble, Nibble—Brazil Nuts!

WHETHER its bridge or back-gammon or the newly-revived mah jong, you won't have time to quibble if there are Brazil nuts to nibble! "Straight" from the shell, glacé, sugared or toasted and salted—Brazil nuts leave no room for argument, they're delicious for a during-the-game snack!

BRAZIL NUT PARTY NIBBLES

Have a party, and be sure to have Brazil nuts for your guests to nibble for they are delicious and easy to prepare in these ways:

Glacé Brazil Nuts

Mix 1 cup sugar, ½ cup light corn syrup, and ½ cup water in top part of double boiler. Cook over direct heat (300° F.) until a small amount hardens in cold water. Remove at once from heat, cool slightly, then set in hot water (in bottom part of double boiler). Drop several Brazil nuts at a time into the syrup. When well-coated remove one by one, drain well and place on greased pan or marble slab to cool.

Sugared Brazil Nuts

Prepare as glacé Brazil nuts but toss each nut thoroughly in granulated sugar after removing from syrup and place on greased pan or marble slab to cool.

Toasted Salted Brazil Nuts

Bake shelled Brazil nuts 10 to 12 minutes in moderate oven. Remove from oven and sprinkle generously with salt. As an alternate method add ½ tablespoon of butter to every pound of shelled Brazil nuts before placing in oven. Stir several times during roasting. Add salt after removing from oven.

WHAT! HOW! WHY! MEAT SUNDRIES

Here Are Answers to Some of the Many Questions Asked About These Meats

Many questions are asked about the meat sundries. What are they? How are they prepared? And how do they rank in nutritive value? So Inez S. Willson, home economist, gives information and suggestions which may answer some of your questions regarding the meat sundries.

Liver

Ever since the discovery of its value in blood building, liver has been considered one of our most healthful foods, and its use is strongly recommended by physicians everywhere. It may be served in dozens of ways—fried with bacon, broiled, braised with vegetables, or ground and made into patties or a meat loaf. In purchasing liver, it must be remembered that all kinds of liver, either beef, pork, lamb, or calf, are valuable nutritionally and may be made delicious.

Heart

Heart, also, ranks extremely high in food value and is very tasty. It may be stuffed with a savory bread dressing if you wish. Whether beef, veal, pork, or lamb, a heart should be cooked by braising, in exactly the same way as a pot-roast. First, it is browned on all sides in hot lard, seasoned with salt and pepper, a small amount of liquid added, and the heart covered and cooked very slowly until done, about three hours.

Kidneys

Kidneys are considered a great delicacy in many homes, and not only are they good, but very good for you because they are rich in certain essential body nutrients. Beef kidneys are usually cooked in water at a simmering temperature, with the water being changed several times in the cooking. Then they may be served in a crochle sauce or in a beefsteak or kidney pie. Veal, lamb, and pork kidneys have become a breakfast favorite in many homes, because they are quickly prepared and well liked.

Brains

Brains are a delicate meat, with a characteristic flavor and texture which makes them highly prized by epicures. Brains first are cooked for fifteen or twenty minutes in water to which 1 teaspoon of salt and 1 tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice are added for each quart. Then they are drained and dropped into cold water to make them firm. When pre-cooked in this way, the brains are ready for any method of cooking you wish, such as frying, creaming, placing in casserole, with vegetables or cooking with scrambled eggs.

Sweetbreads

Sweetbreads are the thymus glands of the calf, and because of their mild, delicious flavor are prized in many households. Usually, they are pre-cooked in slightly acidulated water in exactly the same manner as described above for brains. Then they may be rolled, creamed, breaded and fried, baked, or braised.

Meat Loaves in Wide Variety

Has the meat loaf become a menu standby at your house? If so, well and good, because it deserves to be served often in every household. But remember that any food, regardless how delicious, may become monotonous, if served time after time in the same old way. So there's the cue! Make each meat loaf so different from those served previously—that it will be welcome always. "Meat loaves offer many chances for variety," says Inez S. Willson, home economist. The different kinds of meat—beef, pork, lamb and veal—may

½ cup ketchup
2 wheat biscuits, crumbled
3 eggs, beaten
Salt and pepper

Either beef, pork, lamb or calves' liver may be used. Scald liver, and grind. Add other ingredients except bacon and mix thoroughly. Place two bacon slices in the bottom of a loaf pan, pack the loaf mixture in the pan, and on top lay the other two bacon slices. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until heated through, about forty-five minutes.

Ham and Apricot Loaf

1 pound smoked ham
1 pound fresh pork
1 cup cracker crumbs
½ cup milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup apricot juice and fruit
¼ cup sugar

Have smoked ham from shank or butt end of ham ground with fresh pork shoulder. Combine with cracker crumbs and moisten with milk and eggs. Shape into a loaf in an open pan. Rub cooked apricot halves through a colander, add sugar and cook slowly until slightly thickened. Baste loaf with this sauce during baking. Bake the loaf in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until done, about an hour and a half. The apricot sauce adds a glaze to the outside as well as a delicious flavor to the loaf.

Beef Short Ribs Economical Dish

When you want a well-flavored, delicious, economy meat dish, don't overlook the possibilities which beef short ribs afford. These, as the name implies, are short ribs and because of the abundance of flavor that they contain may be cooked with bland foods and will make the entire dish tasty.

Beef short ribs are cooked by braising. This may be done either on top of the range or in the oven. Inez S. Willson, home economist, suggests cooking them in a casserole with rice. Here is the way:

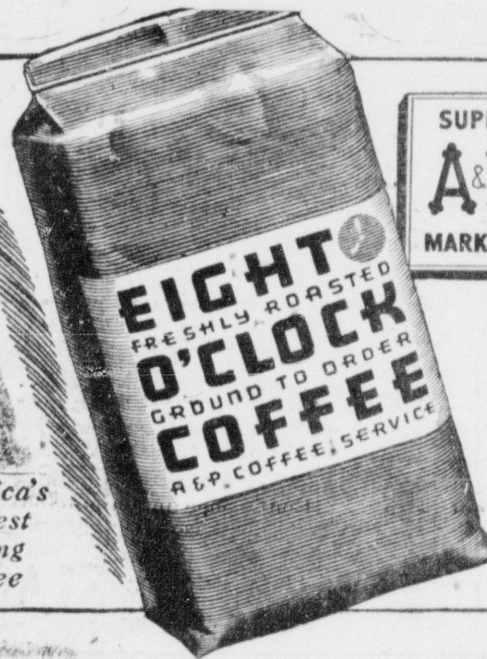

Beef Short Ribs on Casserole

3 pounds short ribs
6 small onions, chopped
1 carrot
3 tablespoons lard
½ cup rice
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
Salt and pepper

Melt the lard in a frying-pan, add onions and brown beef. Put into a casserole dish. Mix tomatoes, rice, sliced carrot, and sugar and pour over beef. Add enough hot water to cover all ingredients. Cover and cook in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for two to three hours.

BUILD FAMILY MEALS AROUND THE NEEDS OF THE YOUNG CHILD

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

The young child grows rapidly and needs foods which will not only keep him healthy but also build new cells. This food in turn will make him taller, larger, and heavier.

Since a child is little and his body not fully matured it is possible for him to consume only a limited amount of food. Therefore, the choice of food and its preparation are important.

Use a wide variety of foods for the young child and build the family meals around his needs. Menus thus planned will be adequate, satisfying, and interesting to the entire family group.

Starting the day with a substantial breakfast, serving the chief meal at midday, and planning for a simple supper is good health insurance for the child and also for the adult members of the family.

Tissue-building foods are essential in the child's diet to fill the demand made by growth. Good sources of such foods are milk, cheese, eggs, fish, chicken, and meat. A certain amount of bulky food is necessary, since it promotes absorption of digested foods and stimulates the action of the intestines. Foods valued for bulk are apples, oranges, pears, dried fruits, and such vegetables as asparagus, cabbage, celery, lettuce, onions, spinach, and string beans. These also provide valuable minerals.

Vitamins are necessary for health and for the protection of the body against disease. Vitamins are found in natural food sources and if the child has a well-balanced diet, he will receive the required amounts of these. Vitamin A, important in relation to growth and maintenance of healthy tissues, is present in butter, cream, whole milk, eggs, green and yellow vegetables, and in cod liver oil and other fish oils.

Vitamins B and G, needed for the proper functioning of the human body, are found in whole grain cereals, vegetables, milk, fruit, and nuts. Vitamin C, present in large amounts in citrus fruits, tomatoes, and raw vegetables and in smaller amounts in most fresh fruits and vegetables, has a marked influence on the development of teeth and bones. The sunshine vitamin, D, is not found abundantly in nature except in the fresh liver oils. Eggs, milk, and butter contain small amounts. Vitamin D protects the child against rickets and promotes the use of calcium and phosphorus.

Police To Again Round Up All Stray Dogs Found Here

Police will again assign a man to round-up all stray dogs and therefore owners of all dogs are cautioned to keep them off the streets, as required by law.

Just when the dog catcher will begin work here is not announced, but dog owners are warned that if they value their dogs and want to protect them they must at once keep them off the streets and in accordance with the state law.

A man will be assigned to round-up all stray dogs. This man will perhaps work for a few days and then be withdrawn. Then he may after a lapse of time again make a tour of the borough and again round-up dogs found running at large.

The Great Game of Politics

tical leadership of the anti-New Deal Democrats and is regarded as the symbol of conservative revolt against the New Deal waste of public funds and trend toward state socialism. Vast publicity has been given to his supposed candidacy for the Presidential nomination and one of Mr. Roosevelt's own sons came out for him. With characteristic lack of public comment, but complete approval Mr. Garner has let his boom develop. He has said no disparaging public word about Mr. Roosevelt and few about his policies, but neither his political nor journalistic friends have the least doubt of his feelings and views. No secret has been made of them.

RECENTLY he has become the target for a concentrated attack by Administration propagandists and newspaper writers too close to the White House not to know the feeling there. By these his continued attendance at Cabinet meetings is assailed as unwelcome and in bad taste. In an article just out it is said that he makes it impossible for the President to talk freely and is regarded as an enemy.

spy in the New Deal camp. Other usually Administration—reflecting journalists use the word traitor in referring to Mr. Garner and assert that he has "stabbed his friends in the back."

—O—

THERE has been so much of this in the last few weeks as to make it appear a more or less inspired campaign to smear Mr. Garner. It followed closely upon the President's speech practically telling conservative Democrats to get out of the party and is plainly designed to spoil the pleasing picture of a sturdy, clear-headed, common-sense Democratic statesman which has been constructed of Mr. Garner in the last two years. The Vice-President is much too shrewd not to realize what is behind these attacks. If they mean anything they mean that a healing of the Democratic split is impossible, that the fight for control of the party will be carried into the convention, that it will grow more bitter as the convention approaches.

—O—

SO FAR as Mr. Garner's candidacy is concerned, men very close to him indeed, are convinced that it is much more for the purpose of convention control than with a view of getting the nomination. Mr. Garner, it is said, is entirely clear-headed about his age, his chances of election and the terrific job the man who follows Mr. Roosevelt will have in trying to straighten out the mess he has made. What he is interested in, they say, is in seeing that the party control is again in conservative hands and the nominee is neither one of the radical New Deal group nor a man who reflects their views and shares their philosophy.

—O—

IT is as plain that Mr. Roosevelt and the one hundred per cent New Dealers will not support a conservative candidate as that the anti-New Deal Democrats will not support a radical acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt. The only alternative seems the selection of a compromise candidate upon whom both sides can unite. Mr. Hull and Mr.

Parley are the names most frequently mentioned in connection with this idea. The belief is growing that Mr. Garner's candidacy is more with a view to having a determining voice in the final choice than anything else. In the meantime he preserves surface cordiality with the President, but is the backbone of the opposition to the spending policy which is basic with the New Deal and always has been.

'BLACKWELL'S ISLAND'

"I guess it all began back in the gangster film era," mused Miss Faye. "Girls were hit with grapefruit—and the fans loved it! Lovely ladies took it on the chin—and the customers clamored for more! Now, look at the result, The 'weaker' sex is taking the beating of its life."

Almost all of his life, Frankie Darro, star of Monogram's "Tough Kid," now at the Ritz Theatre, has been a screen star.

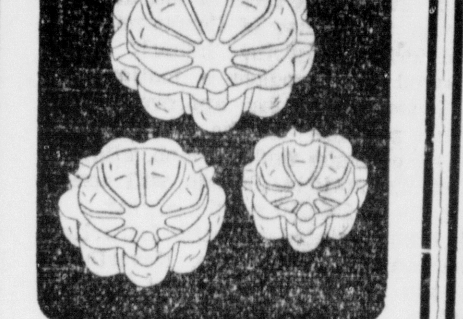

Way back in silent days Frankie was one of the first child personalities to appear on the screen. He made his first picture when he was only four, and then worked up from bit parts until he was featured in a kid series of action pictures.

"The Rainbow Man," in 1929 was his first talking picture, and since that time the list of films Darro has been featured in include "The Mayor of Hell," "Wild Boys of the Road," "Charlie Chan at the Racetrack" and "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry."

Frankie is now under contract to Monogram for four "Murphy Family" pictures, the first of which, "Wanted by the Police," was released last summer.

Craftsmen call the design Spool, because it's an ingenious interpretation of the spool-turning on Early American furniture. So solid is the crystal, so perfectly executed, you'll think it's hand carved. And indeed, it is handmade.

The Spool pattern is available in many other pieces. Each is unique, daring, exquisite but inexpensive.

BRISTOL

Hal Roach's "Topper Takes A Trip," which was presented for its premiere showing last night at the Bristol Theatre through United Artists release, is one of the daffiest, gayest and most uproariously funny comedies to reach the screen this season. Beautifully staged, brilliantly directed and played expertly by a hand-picked cast, this new film production deserves to be placed conspicuously on every screen fan's Best Ten list.

Monogram has rung the bell again for producing a timely and thrilling feature concerning espionage, "Navy Secrets," now playing at the Bristol Theatre, has particularly great entertainment value, especially at this time when the daily newspapers and newsreels are crammed full of foreign spy situations and discussions of the possibilities of international combat. "Navy Secrets" is fast moving and contains a score of excellent characterizations with particular emphasis on the performances of Fay Wray and Grant Withers. Always a competently successful stage comedy of the actress, Miss Wray handles her role in this Monogram offering in swell fashion. She is seen as a Navy G-woman who with the aid of Withers turns the tables on a ring of foreigners out to obtain valuable naval secrets.

Boasting one of the greatest comedy casts ever assembled, "Yes, My Darling Daughter," the Warner Bros. screen adaptation of the sensational

In the romantic leads are those two charming youngsters, Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn, who were such a heart-warming pair of young lovers in the memorable "Four Daughters." Their romance again travels a rocky road, but this time there is no tragedy about it. In fact, it's the nucleus out of which all the amusing complications of the hilarious story evolve.

Market-Places
in Type

Think of a great market-place where farmers, merchants, clothiers, caterers stand and solicit your trade. All who make the clothes you wear, the furniture and draperies for your house, the medicines that keep you well, eagerly seek the chance to tell you of their wares.

Such, in effect, is the newspaper. Here, in a great market-place, set in type, manufacturers whose names you know ask for your patronage. By printed word, they tell you why this brand of corn flakes is superior . . . why this maple corner-cupboard is worth more than is asked . . . why the desk, the motor car, the life insurance, the book will add to your joy of living.

Heed the advertisements well. They have a message that will save you money, conserve your time and patience, richly reward you and your family.

STRAFFE RENAMED TO MANAGE BOXING SHOWS

Johnny Straffe has been re-appointed matchmaker for the 1939 amateur boxing season, by St. Ann's Club. A spokesman for the Club said: "Johnny is naturally gifted in this capacity, having been virtually born and raised in the fight game. "Sports fans of a decade ago will readily recall the sensational and memorable boxing history of this Bristol boy, the recognition and publicity he brought to Bristol and the path of glory he cut for himself in the pugilistic circles. Many on popenent exuberantly confident before his fight, soon learned to his complete sorrow and greatest discomfort, that the mild-mannered boy he had met but a few moments before was quickly transposed into a most efficient and destructive fighting machine. Johnny was truly—a gentleman of the streets—a tiger in the ring. "Outstanding among his many tributes in his colorful career is his great display of sportsmanship; and it is this asset and this alone that enables him in his present capacity of matchmaker to select as opponents boys whose weight, experience and general ability are so evenly matched that the fight fans in the vicinity have braved even the most severe downpours just to witness these remarkable bouts. "Johnny was always a great crowd pleaser in the ring and this tradition seems to follow his present enterprise. "To the faithful sports' public in this vicinity who have supported amateur boxing in Bristol through their whole-hearted co-operation in attending these bouts, Johnny Straffe promises a bigger and better season than ever before. Every effort will be made and no expense will be spared to secure the best performers, accommodations and enjoyment possible."

PEIO MAY NOT BE ABLE TO COMPETE IN BIG EVENT

For the last several weeks, Roman "Fit" Peio, a sophomore at the East Stroudsburg State Teachers College, has been training diligently for the coming National Gymnastic championships. Last year, due to an injury received in his gymnastic work, he was unable to get in his best shape, and lost the rope climbing championship. This year Peio again received an injury in a horizontal bar routine. O. J. Liljenstein, coach of the gym team and faculty member at the college, has been working on Peio's arm, giving it massage and heat treatments. Under his care, Peio has been getting back in trim and is making progress, as shown by his time trials. As yet, Roman is not certain that he will be ready for the nationals, but will know better after a week more of practice. The championships are to be held on Saturday, May 13, at Annapolis, Maryland, which is the home floor of the present record holder.

must not be regarded as the exclusively decisive weapon" the general holds that anti-armor guns and mines are likely to develop into a veritable danger for the armored weapons. Consequently General Wetzell urged the formation of special "barrage troops" particularly trained and equipped for fighting tanks and armored cars.

General Wetzell believes that operative actions of the armored weapons look doubtful but that there is a possibility of using the modern weapons in attempts to encircle and crush the enemy's flanks, or even fight the enemy from the rear after breaking through at the flanks. In this connection, General Wetzell frankly stated that he disbelieved in surprising mass attacks of the armored weapons, writing:

"Whoever in consideration of the strong air-forces on both sides reckons with massed attacks of the armored weapon might be deceived in wartime."

The general called night-time "not the friend of the armored weapon" and saw a weakness in its lack of noiselessness. In this connection, the general pointed to important operations in the World War betrayed by the noise accompanying preparations taken during the night.

Finally, the general held that employment of massed parachute formations in European theaters of war seemed to be excluded, mainly because of the difficulties of deployment of such units and enemy counter-measures. He summarized as follows: "To speak of the possibility of landing larger mixed forces behind an enemy front line on European theaters of war (it's something entirely different in the vast areas of Russia, Asia and Africa) seems rather fantastic for the time being."

Finishing his review of modern weapons the general drew his conclusions about modern strategy by writing:

"Strategy is not dependent on technique and must never become so." In another place the general even claimed that the art of conducting war has not changed materially since Hannibal.

The last part of Wetzell's article is taken up by speculations as to the role of the statesmen and the military commander-in-chief in time of peace and war. In direct reference to recent times the general urged the necessity of good generals by writing:

"From experience in our political leadership since the beginning of the century as well as from many other experiences of former times, the conclusion might be drawn that it requires a great calibre statesman to master the gravest test. Such a fallacy must be warned against."

Driving home his point by quoting Gamelin, Wetzell stated:

"There was only one statesman-general during the last 400 years, Cromwell." On the other hand, Wetzell admitted that there were many more general-statesmen like Frederick the Great, Gustave Adolphe of Sweden, George Washington, and others.

General Wetzell strongly opposed Ludendorff's demand that the fate of the nation should be trusted to the statesman and commander-in-chief in one person and claimed that such theory was probably shaped in accordance with Ludendorff's predominant personality, but could not be applied to normal conditions.

Therefore, he pleaded for a clean-cut limitation of mutual powers and fields of action of the statesman and the commander-in-chief (Feldherr), with the understanding that neither "butts in" into affairs of the other. He even urged the necessity of several military commanders able to conduct all operations, claiming that the tasks awaiting such a general would be simply stupendous and would probably be too much for the shoulders of the most ingenious and strongest personality.

For the practical conduct of war Wetzell pleaded for small staffs and urged the utmost possible personal contact of GHQ with the various armies in the field. Claiming that the Marne battle in 1914 was mainly lost owing to a lack of contact the general stated:

"The future commander-in-chief had better avail himself of the airplane together with his small staff. The 'commander-in-chief at the desk' was a Fata Morgana shattered by hard facts in war." The general cast an interesting side-light on the art of conducting wars by stating, in contradiction to many laymen and experts, "there is no such thing as quick decisions with GHQ. There always is time enough for important decisions."

Reviewing the mistakes made by the German GHQ during the World War, General Wetzell held that many operations resulted in failure only because of the lack of contact with the front line and admitted frankly that Hindenburg and Ludendorff made a big mistake in under-estimating the military value and strength of the American troops.

As a matter of fact, he declared that the war was lost through America's entrance into the war. He even went so far as to claim that the unrestricted submarine warfare approved by Hindenburg and Ludendorff prevented a decisive military victory in 1917.

Concluding, General Wetzell pleaded for the creation of large bicycle corps and for the creation of a Reich Academy for high military leaders and future diplomats where both classes of men destined to direct the nation can become acquainted with the elements of each others' profession, thereby preventing blunders caused in the World War through

Chancellor completed his reply to President Roosevelt's appeal for a quarter century of "guaranteed peace."

The Fuehrer has finished the draft of his address, it was said, but it remains subject to last minute alterations. Whether he will join the government-controlled Nazi press in ridiculing British conscription could not be determined.

Editor's note—The London Daily Mail reported today that Hitler spent last evening witnessing a revue called the "Midnight Melody" starring the American dancer, Mirlan Verne, of Pittsburgh, one of the Fuehrer's favorite entertainers.)

In addition to his Reichstag speech, Hitler will address the annual May Day assembly in the Lustgarten on Monday. He may use this opportunity to retort to President Roosevelt should the President deal with European affairs in his speech opening the New York World's Fair on Sunday.

Meanwhile, so far as the official German viewpoint is concerned, even the extremity of British conscription failed to shake down Berlin's conviction that Europe's war remains confined to verbal barrages and diplomatic maneuvers.

BERLIN, Apr. 27—Further evidence of Germany's aerial might was revealed today with announcement that a German Messerschmidt pursuit plane had established a new world speed record.

By Charles A. Smith (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Apr. 27 — (INS) — Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's announcement of compulsory military training for young men between the ages of 20 and 21 faced a hot debate today in the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister himself was scheduled to introduce a motion in the House asking for approval "as soon as possible" of the compulsory training program under which, allowing for exemptions, Britain will conscript about 200,000 youths a year.

All signs pointed to bitter Laborite opposition to the measure. Nevertheless, the House of Commons is believed to be overwhelmingly in favor of the measure, judging from the reception it gave Chamberlain's announcement yesterday.

The Laborites, under leadership of opposition chief Major Clement Richard Attlee, will launch their sniping attack against conscription by introducing their own amendment to Chamberlain's motion. This amendment will express regret over the Government's abandonment of the former system of voluntary recruiting to fill the ranks of Britain's armed forces.

Authorities said the actual bill designed to give the government powers to carry out the conscription program will be introduced into Parliament next week. Today's motion, they said,

LAWNMOWERS Sharpened on the IDEAL SHARPENER

This machine automatically sharpens the blades with the correct level. Your mower will RUN LIKE NEW, stay sharp longer and wear longer than when sharpened by any other method. Give us a trial. Prompt service — Satisfaction guaranteed.

MY PULLETS START LAYING EARLY....IN TIME FOR ME TO CASH IN ON HIGH EGG PRICES!

PURINA CHICK GROWENA (COMPLETE ALL-MASH)

IT TAKES only 16 Growena's to carry a pullet from the 6th to 20th week. When it lays extra eggs—while egg prices are at their peak—you can't afford to "rough" your birds through the summer.

is merely being presented for purposes of debate.

The conscription bill to be introduced later will provide the government with conscription powers for three years. As Chamberlain explained it in his historic announcement yesterday:

"The proposal is designed with one single object, to render the country able to carry out the engagements entered into in the belief that in that way the peace of Europe can best be secured."

just about a month ago by the old trouper, Richard Bennett, one of the directors of the project. With Bennett at the time was Burgess Meredith, stage and screen star, who will be one of the directors and actors at the playhouse which is expected to be completed in time for "straw hat" season.

At yesterday's meeting it was reported that the floors of the old mill have been removed, making way for the auditorium construction part of the theatre. One end has been torn down for the periceneum arch, and a gaping hole in the west side marks the spot where the orchestra box will be placed.

Digging for the stage house foundations, which will be on the north end of the historic mill, has been completed. The stage house has been designed to tone in with the existing structure. Concrete block and 46 tons of structural steel will be built into it. The stage proper will be 30 by 60 feet, and 45 feet from the floor to the bottom of the grid. This is large enough for any standard big town dramatic show of top professional grade.

Authorization of the publication of the first list of subscribers took place yesterday. They include: Henry Chapin, Paula V. Chapin, Marshall Cole, Bertha Bates Cole, Frederick Child, Charles Child, Ruth B. Folinsbee, John Folinsbee, George Dyer, Morris L. Cooke, Eleanor B. Cooke, Donald J. Walker, Audrey Walker, Jack Kirkland, Halla Stoddard, Buddy Ebsen, Moss Hart, John L. Kuser, Jr., Olivia Erdman Kuser, Robert A. Street, Fred B. Jackel, J. Carroll Molloy, Philip Shein, Monroe Gutman, James A. Skillman, C. A. Niece, Emma Fell Thinsman, Dr. E. A. Lowe, Helen Porter-Lowe, Margaret Walter, Alice Walter, Robert L. Walter, Jr., M. Adele Walker, Priscilla Mellor, Helene Mellor, Henry Bristol, Henry Baker, Kenyon Nicholson, Robert W. Shaw, John Ross, Thomas Rose, May Blakey Ross, J. Cooper Pidcock, Whitney North Seymour, Benjamin Sidon, William Cryer, Robert Kessler, Mrs. Paul Mazur, Stockton Inn, Joseph Finkle, George F. Tyler, William Hunt, Norman K. Morse, James A. Rufe, John Graham.

Directors pointed out that while this list is up-to-date, it does not represent the complete list of shareholders that will eventually stand as founders of the playhouse and community center. Some 30 of the original 300 shares remain available.

A letter from the producer of this summer's professional season, St. John Terrell, of New York, was read which announced the special privileges shareholders will have during the first summer's stock. Besides absolute first choice of seats in the theatre, which will only accommodate about 300, subscribers will be provided with free parking spaces on the theatre grounds and other special benefits.

The Playhouse corporation has undertaken to finish the work of renovation in time to let the producer into the theatre by June 17, so that he will have a couple of weeks of rehearsal before the formal season opens. A community celebration is planned for the opening night, which will probably be July 1.
